

Deepa Mann-Kler heading to the Waterfront

'A Strange Kind of Peace'

DEEPA has taken a year off work, from the Equality Commission, to pursue her dream of being an artist.

Her work is strong and vibrant and reflects contemporary issues facing society today. Deepa's current work will be exhibited February 4th 2008 at Belfast's Waterfront.

This exhibition explores the whole idea of contrast. Deepa was delighted to have Clive Wedderburn as her subject - the actor on the BBC's Asian network soap "Silver Street".

Equality and identity are key themes of her work. She explores the inter-relationship between race, gender and our understandings of the spaces we inhabit and the symbols we use. The paintings invite us to consider how we define our understandings, and if we can create a sense of peace about the conflicting issues we encounter.

Deepa Mann-Kler, one of Northern Ireland's most exciting artists is heading to the Waterfront in February SA0601