

LISBURN in brief

New exhibition at Lisburn Library

DEEPA Mann-Kler, one of Northern Ireland's most exciting artists, will be exhibiting her new works at Lisburn City Library from November 5.

Deepa's paintings are powerful, vibrant and reflect contemporary issues. Her strength is to explore contrasts, be it, between light and dark, or vulnerable and strong poses. This is characteristic of her work and one that she continues to explore.

Deepa said: "I am really excited by this new show and the direction that my work is going in. I am so happy to be exhibiting in Lisburn City Library, not only is the Gallery an amazing space, but it also means that my work is being taken directly to people. I am further delighted that 10% of all proceeds from the sale of my paintings will be donated to Save The Children in Northern Ireland."

Deepa Mann-Kler with Terry Bradley.

Deepa's style and subjects continue to be highly original. Her work sells across galleries in Belfast and Northern Ireland and is highly collectible.

The exhibition runs in Gallery on 2 until December 22.