

Deepa's art comes to Opera House

AWARD-WINNING Ulster artist Deepa Mann-Kler is bringing her new exhibition "A Touch of the Red Blues" to Belfast's Grand Opera House later this week.

The exhibition, which runs from November 5-7, features large portraits of strong women and men, in powerful poses, with a bold use of reds and browns. Deepa had Clive Wedderburn — a former actor on The Bill — as her male subject.

"The venue presents a great space for exhibiting the scale, colours and modern feel of my paintings," said Deepa, who has been busy this year with with international exhibitions in China and Germany and corporate and private commissions.

Examples of the Nottingham-born artist's work currently hang in private collections in Japan, India, Ireland, Belgium, France and Northern Ireland.
